84. Which of the following would be an effect of growing mismatches (p. 47-between the amount of education needed to perform current jobs and the amount of education possessed by members of the workforce?)

A. An increase in work motivation among college graduates

B. An excessive number of people with teamwork skills

C. A decrease in absenteeism and turnover among well-educated workers

D. A shortage of qualified people in technical fields

E. Elimination of the need for job redesign

Mismatches between the amount of education needed to perform current jobs and the amount of education possessed by members of the workforce are growing. This trend creates two potential problems for organizations. First, there will be a shortage of qualified people in technical fields. Second, underemployment among college graduates threatens to erode job satisfaction and work motivation.

A. social categorization theory

B. Attraction-Selection-Attrition theory

C. hierarchy of needs theory

D. organizational socialization theory

E. information/decision-making theory

The social categorization perspective holds that similarities and differences are used as a basis for categorizing self and others into groups, with ensuing categorizations distinguishing between one's own in-group and one or more out-groups.

According to the social categorization theory:

(p. 50)

A. female employees face the glass ceiling to a greater extent than minority employees.

B. minority employees face the glass ceiling to a greater extent than female employees.

C. homogeneous work groups will outperform heterogeneous work groups.

D. heterogeneous work groups will outperform homogeneous work groups.

E. organizations should manage gender-related diversity in order to attract qualified women.

The social categorization perspective implies that similarity leads to liking and attraction, thereby fostering a host of positive outcomes. If this were the case, one would expect that the more homogeneous a work group, the higher the member commitment and group cohesion, and the lower the amount of interpersonal conflicts.

D. heterogeneous work groups will outperform homogeneous work groups.

E. gender and racial diversity lead to negative outcomes.

Research regarding the information/decision-making theory tells us that the amount of diversity in a work group is positively associated with task relevant processes and decision making, which in turn fosters positive outcomes. Thus, according to this theory, heterogeneous work groups will outperform homogeneous work groups.

Essay Questions
Distinguish between the various layers of diversity, giving at least three examples of each of the layers.

Personality represents the core layer of diversity because it represents a stable set of characteristics that is responsible for a person's identity. The next layer of diversity consists of a set of internal dimensions that are referred to as surface-level dimensions of diversity. These dimensions, for the most part, are not within our control but they strongly influence our attitudes and expectations and assumptions about others. Examples include age, race, gender, and sexual orientation. The next layer of diversity is composed of external influences, which are referred to as secondary dimensions of diversity. They represent individual differences that we have a greater ability to influence or control. These dimensions also exert a significant influence on our perceptions, behaviors, and attitudes. Examples include religion, educational background, and marital status. Finally, the last layer of diversity includes organizational dimensions such as seniority, job title, job function, and work location.

100. Explain the differences between affirmative action and managing diversity. Be specific in your answer.

Affirmative action is a result of equal employment opportunity legislation designed to outlaw discrimination. Affirmative action is an artificial intervention aimed at giving management a chance to correct an imbalance, an injustice, or outright discrimination. Affirmative action created opportunities for women and minorities, but it does not foster the type of thinking that is needed to effectively manage diversity. In fact, affirmative action programs can sometimes negatively affect the women and minorities expected to benefit from them if these employees feel stigmatized as unqualified or incompetent. In contrast, managing diversity entails enabling people to perform up to their maximum potential. It focuses on changing an organization's culture and infrastructure so that employees can provide the highest productivity possible.

The following seven initiatives can help to keep older workers engaged and committed to working:

(1) Provide challenging work assignments that make a difference to the firm.
(2) Give the employee considerable autonomy and latitude in completing a task.
(3) Provide equal access to training and learning opportunities when it comes to new technology.
(4) Provide frequent recognition for skills, experience, and wisdom gained over the years.
(5) Provide mentoring opportunities whereby older workers can pass on accumulated knowledge to younger employees.
(6) Ensure that older workers receive sensitive, high-quality supervision.
(7) Design a work environment that is both stimulating and fun.

Based on your knowledge of the process model of diversity, what steps would you take as a manager to reduce potential negative effects of diversity? Explain how the steps would reduce potential negative effects of diversity.

One step that can be taken to reduce the potential negative effects of diversity is to provide training that assists employees in developing interpersonal skills, such as conflict management or communication. Secondly, creating support groups for employees may ease the tensions of working in diverse groups. Finally, using a group goal could reduce the effects of unconscious stereotyping. According to the process model of diversity, the quality of interpersonal processes influences the outcome of a work group. The first two steps increase the quality of interpersonal processes and group dynamics thus resulting in positive work outcomes, such as low turnover and higher productivity. Since diversity in a work-group is positively associated with task-relevant processes that foster positive outcomes, it would be expected that by providing a common goal for a work-group it would reduce the negative effects of diversity.

Topic: The Positive and Negative Effects of Diverse Work Environments
The following is a list of the most common barriers to implementing successful diversity programs:

1. Inaccurate stereotypes and prejudice: This barrier manifests itself in the belief that differences are viewed as weaknesses. In turn, this promotes the view that diversity hiring will mean sacrificing competence and quality.
2. Ethnocentrism: The ethnocentrism barrier represents the feeling that one's cultural rules and norms are superior or more appropriate than the rules and norms of another culture.
3. Poor career planning: This barrier is associated with the lack of opportunities for diverse employees to get the type of work assignments that qualify them for senior management positions.
4. A negative diversity climate: Climate is generally viewed as employee perception about an organization's formal and informal policies, practices, and procedures. Diversity climate is a subcomponent of an organization's overall climate and is defined as the employees' aggregate "perceptions about the organization's diversity-related formal structure characteristics and informal values." Diversity climate is positive when employees view the organization as being fair to all types of employees.
5. An unsupportive and hostile working environment for diverse employees: Sexual, racial, and age harassment are common examples of hostile work environments. Whether perpetrated against women, men, older individuals, or LGBT people, hostile environments are demeaning, unethical, and appropriately called "work environment pollution."
6. Lack of political savvy on the part of diverse employees: Diverse employees may not get promoted because they do not know how to "play the game" of getting along and getting ahead in an organization.
(7) Difficulty in balancing career and family issues: Women still assume the majority of the responsibilities associated with raising children. This makes it harder for women to work evenings and weekends or to frequently travel once they have children. Even without children in the picture, household chores take more of a woman’s time than a man’s time.

(8) Fears of reverse discrimination: Some employees believe that managing diversity is a smoke screen for reverse discrimination. This belief leads to very strong resistance because people feel that one person's gain is another's loss.

(9) Diversity is not seen as an organizational priority: This leads to subtle resistance that shows up in the form of complaints and negative attitudes. Employees may complain about the time, energy, and resources devoted to diversity that could have been spent doing "real work."

(10) The need to revamp the organization's performance appraisal and reward system: Performance appraisals and reward systems must reinforce the need to effectively manage diversity. This means that success will be based on a new set of criteria.

(11) Resistance to change: Effectively managing diversity entails significant organizational and personal change.
